Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Fruit Situation, Vol. 48: December, 1940 Total production of fruits in 1940 is likely to be slightly smaller than in 1939. However, since there will be considerably less fruit exported this year, the total supply available for fresh domestic consumption probably will approximate that of a year earlier. Increased consumers income has not as yet caused any material improve ment over last year in the demand for fresh fruits. Since changes in consumer demand for fresh fruit usually lag several months behind changes in consumer income, expenditures by consumers for fresh fruit for the remainder of the 1940-41 season are expected to be considerably greater than for the same period in 1939-40. The commercial apple crop this year is approximately million bushels smaller than a year earlier. This decrease in total commercial pro duction was the result of a considerable reduction in the crop in the eastern and central regions. The apple crop in.the western States was million bushels larger than that of last year. Farm prices of apples as of November 15 were 13 cents higher for the country as a whole than comparable prices in 1940. Prices in the eastern and central areas averaged about 20 cents higher than in November 1939, while prices in the western States averaged 2 cents lower. The higher prices in the Eastern and Central States were largely the result of small crops in these areas.
